The 310th Ferrying Squadron was assigned a B-26B, SN 41-31742. It was flown primarily by Captain Fay Brandis, and Crew Chief, S/Sgt. Ray Dlouhy. The aircraft was olive drab with gray undersurfaces. The entire engine nacelles and cowlings were natural metal. The vertical stabilizer was marked with the yellow and black stripes, and it had invasion stripes on the lower portion of the fuselage. The airplane wore the name and nose art "Demon Deacon."

Right: Aircraft nick-name "DOTTIE" on one of the B-17s. Notice there are no guns in the nose, and the round patch where the chin turret was removed.

Below: The 27th ATG had some B-17s assigned, which were stripped of all guns to conserve weight and increase speed. These aircraft were used as taxi ships and as gas tankers. This example is in natural metal finish. The only real indication it is with the group is the yellow and black tail stripe. Also note the invasion stripes on the lower portion of the fuselage.

B-26B of the 310th Ferrying Squadron, "Demon Deacon."
