

908 MISSION SUPPORT GROUP

MISSION

The 908 Mission Support Group mission is to provide, manage, and sustain agile combat support capabilities, anytime...anywhere. The 908 Mission Support Group is the echelon of command, and the conduit between, the 908 Airlift Wing and the group's five subordinate units; the 25th Aerial Port Squadron, the 908 Civil Engineer Squadron, the 908 Force Support Squadron, the 908 Logistics Readiness Squadron, and the 908 Security Forces Squadron.

The mission support group has more than 400 members in and under its command, ranging from 370 traditional reservists down to nine civilians, all of which play a role in enabling the group to accomplish its mission. A vast majority of those members belong to five squadrons under the group. The group has approximately 12 people that work directly for it, and eight of them are fulltime members.

Commanders support staff section provides program oversight and compliance with Air Force and DoD policies. They advise group and squadron leadership and ensure commander's guidance is clearly articulated across functional lines. They provide task management oversight, coordination authority, and other staffing and administrative support for more than 400 group personnel. Specific roles and responsibilities include Executive Officer, Resource Advisor, Unit Deployment Manager, Group Training Manager, Facility Manager and Career Assistance Advisor.
