EMBLEM

The globe represents the worldwide mission of the Air Force Communications Command. The three stars in the heavens represent the three major functional areas of the organization: air traffic control, operations, and maintenance, and the three Air Force Outstanding Unit Awards which the squadron has won. The hand, holding the airplane, signifies that an aircraft is in good hands when it is under the control of an Air Force air traffic controller. The lightning bolt represents the speed of communications and command guidance.
