EMBLEM

During its activation in the 1940s, the 37th group used a simple emblem--the Air Force yellow cross on an Air Force blue shield — that signified its history as the "Defender of the Crossroads." That motto referred to the 37th Pursuit Group's defense of the Panama Canal Zone during World War II. The group's emblem then differed slightly from its emblem today. It had the same yellow cross on a blue field, but within an Army shield. A purple and yellow Griffin—with the head of an eagle, and body and legs of a lion to represent the swiftness, strength, and sagacity of the unit in performing its mission —also sat on top of this emblem.

NICKNAME

OPERATIONS

Constituted as the 37th Pursuit Group (Interceptor) on 22 December 1939 as part of the USAAC's 54 Group Program, and activated in the Panama Canal Zone 1 February 1940, this unit was one more element in the growing defense posture for the Canal.
