ATC Operations Center Activated. To gain some relief from a congressionally-imposed manpower ceiling on management headquarters personnel, ATC had established the 3309th Training Readiness Squadron in 1984. Subsequently, a problem arose concerning the performance evaluations of officers assigned to the 3309th because their records did not indicate a major command assignment, though they directly supported ATC. On 1 January 1986 the command established a named unit-the ATC Operations Center at Randolph-and inactivated the 3309th.

The 3309th managed the command's readiness program and served as ATC's intelligence function.
