OPERATIONS

The wing at Glasgow Air Force Base officially came into being as the 4141st Strategic Wing on September 1, 1958, as a member of the Fifteenth Air Force.

4141ST SW Activated at Glasgow AFB, Montana, in 1958-59. Inactivated on 1/2/63, aircraft/personnel resources passed to 91 BW at same base.

Glasgow AFB became a SAC (Strategic Air Command) base in 1960. The runway was lengthened to 13,500 feet in length to support the coming of Boeing B-52 bombers and Boeing KC-135 tankers. In February 1961, the 326th Bombardment Squadron, equipped with B-52C aircraft were transferred to Glasgow AFB from Fairchild AFB, Washington, as part of the 4141st Strategic Wing. In its first year, this became the top wing in the Fifteenth Air Force.

The 4141st Strategic Wing was inactivated at Glasgow AFB on February 1, 1963 and its B-52C aircraft were transferred to the 322th Bombardment Squadron, 91st Bombardment Wing, which was trained for global bombardment and aerial refueling. The wing also received and converted to B-52D aircraft and its 907th Air Refueling Squadron received KC-135A aircraft. The 91st Wing Headquarters staff, tactical aircraft and 322th Bomb Squadron crews, and most support personnel served in the SAC B-52D Arc Light Force for combat in Southeast Asia during the Vietnam War.

4141st Strategic Wing, September 1, 1958 - February 1, 1963. Not equipped, September 1, 1958 – February 1, 1961
