OPERATIONS

The Weapons School Support Division was activated in October 1997. The Support Division was redesignated as the 57th Weapons Support Squadron and assumes its lineage from the 57th Training Support Squadron originally activated on 1 November 1991. In this unit's short history it has been responsible for helping guide some of the most far-reaching changes in Weapon School history. These included the complete renovation of the two main Weapon School buildings, upgrading all Weapons School briefing, debriefing, and academic rooms, and adding state-of-the-art video equipment; completion of a new Adversary Support facility; transfer of a significant portion of Weapons School academic instruction to contract support; implementation of the Tactical Aircrew Scheduling and Maintenance System which automates the daily flying schedule for the Weapons School's flying squadrons; and the design of a "Weapons School 2007" military construction plan that will, over the next five years, expand Weapons School facilities to include a new library, auditorium, secured working areas for all Weapons School squadrons, and the eventual culmination of the F/A-22 Weapons School beddown.
