OPERATIONS

During the early 1990s, the 1st Fighter Wing assumed responsibility of three new missions--air control, airlift, and search and rescue. On 15 March 1992, the 74th Air Control Squadron was transferred to the 1st Fighter Wing. The 74th provided command and control of air operations for worldwide operations.

74th Air Control Squadron provided the largest contingent of 1st Fighter Wing personnel and equipment to Operation Noble Anvil. The 74th set up their equipment outside Budapest, Hungary, to provide joint forces and theater commanders with an accurate air picture for conducting offensive and defensive missions. During Operation Allied Force, the 74th Air Control Squadron deployed to provide critical air control in the European Theater of Operations.

Deployed: Operation Noble Anvil (The Balkan War), outside Budapest, Hungary; Operation Allied Force
